Gatineau cop shot breaking up bush party

Overnight search. Officer is in stable condition following surgery, police still looking for suspect

JOE LOFARO
joe.lofaro@metronews.ca

A Gatineau police officer is recovering from minor surgery after she was shot in the leg while trying to break up a bush party in a wooded area off Rue Saint-Louis near the Gatineau River Saturday night.

Gatineau police spokesperson Pierre Lanthier said that the officer was in "pretty good condition" Sunday morning and is expected to be OK.

After police responded at 10 p.m. to a call about a disturbance near Rue Saint-Louis, they set up a large perimeter around Rue Saint-Louis, Rue de Picardie and Avenue Gatineau. Police interviewed 30 people who were either persons of interest or witnesses.

At around 4:35 a.m. Sunday, Quebec provincial police began to sweep the area from a helicopter to look for people involved in the incident. At 5:25 a.m., a 20-year-old man was arrested at the scene when a Gatineau police officer monitoring the perimeter noticed him trying to leave.

Police could not confirm whether or not he was armed. He remains in custody to appear in court on unrelated, outstanding charges, Lanthier said. No charges are expected to be laid in relation to this investigation at this time, according to Gatineau police.

At 6 a.m. police were still questioning witnesses because information provided to them indicated at there could have been more than one person who was armed.

A sweep of the area ended at around 9:45 Sunday morning, and the perimeter was lifted, allowing Rue Saint-Louis to reopen to commuters. Police are still searching for the suspect who wounded the three-year police officer.

Mural law paints 'building of heritage interest' into corner

Pour Boy. Pub owner hopes artwork aimed at deterring graffiti will be exempted from bylaw

joe.lofaro@metronews.ca

The owner of a new pub that just opened last weekend in Somerset Ward is hoping the city will let him bypass a municipal bylaw and keep a mural he had painted on the facade to thwart graffiti artists from tagging the building.

In a report heading to the city's planning committee Tuesday, staff noted that Pour Boy at the intersection of Somerset and Lyon is a "building of heritage interest" and is prone to ongoing vandalism.

Anthony Marko, Pour Boy's owner, hired an artist from Toronto to paint the blank facade with a vibrant mural featuring singer Bob Dylan prominently displayed in the foreground. But in mid-April, he said a bylaw officer came by and told him someone complained about it.

It contravenes with the Signs on Private Property Bylaw, which prohibits the painting of a mural on the exterior wall of an entrance to a building.

"I think if the business owner has permission from the landlord, murals should be allowed on the front," said Marko on Sunday as he oversaw the pub's soft opening on Mother's Day.

The report said ward councillor Diane Holmes is supportive of making an exception for Pour Boy, "given that this mural addresses ongoing problematic graffiti-tagging complaints, which will free up staff resources."

Before the mural was painted, there was just a flat colour, which Marko said was "ripe" for graffiti artists.

"By having a nice mural, graffiti artists or taggers as a general rule don't go over

Anthony Marko, owner of Pour Boy, wants the city to let him keep the mural on the façade of his pub at 495 Somerset St. even though it contravenes a municipal bylaw. JOE LOFARO/METRO other people's art like that," said Marko.

He wonders, though, if the person who complained might have mistaken the mural for unwanted graffiti because the feedback he has received so far has been positive.

"Everyone loves it. They think it looks great. It adds a great dimension to the neighbourhood," he said.

He plans to attend the planning committee meeting Tuesday to see if councillors will recommend city council allow the mural to stay. If the city doesn't let him keep the mural, Marko said he might file a petition.

Accused wife-murderer was jealous: Friend

POLICE HANDOUT

Mark Hutt became red-faced with anger when he saw his late wife, Donna Jones, dance with a 15-year-old boy at a wedding, a court heard Friday.

"You could see he was very angry. He was not wanting to turn around to see the dance," said Jones' longtime friend Michael Paquette, who had known the late 33-year-old since their teen years at Woodroffe High School.

Hutt is accused of first-degree murder in Jones' death.

"It was just odd because it was a wedding. She didn't have a choice who she was dancing with," said Paquette, explaining that the boy was the best man and she the maid of honour. "You could see him getting red and staring down."

Jones died on Dec. 6, 2009, after being scalded by boiling water on Nov. 24. She was allegedly left untreated for 11 days while her wounds festered. Jones also suffered a broken nose, ribs, a swollen face, bruises and rashes all over her body when police found her. Hutt pleaded not guilty to the charge of first-degree murder.

Another longtime friend,

Krista Moulds, testified that her 21-year friendship with Jones began to erode after the wedding incident and that she had seen less and less of Jones after she began dating Hutt. This was odd, she said, because Jones was a leader among their tight-knit group of friends and had never withdrawn when dating other men.

Comicon character chameleons captured

Another universe. Forget the celebs, the real fun was on Comiccon's floor, among the cosplayers

SEAN MCKIBBON
sean.mckibbon@metronews.ca

It was almost immediately clear on Sunday who the real stars of the event were and where the real fun was.

Cosplayers decked out in their finest outfits — everything from Little Red Riding Hood to Ash from Army of Darkness — would spontaneously provoke a flashmob of paparazzi, posing with folks who weren't dressed, posing with other cosplayers they didn't even know and then often returning the compliment and whipping out their own cameras to snap pics of the shutterbugs, who were also dressed.

Marvel Kung Fu superhero Ironfist, a.k.a. ESL teacher Andre Hayde

This would happen about every four or five steps. Kings, Jedi, Avengers, scantily clad or armour clad, you name it, people were being it. "Even if there were no good stars I would come just to see the other people in costumes. It's like Halloween," said Isabelle Enright, a.k.a. Marvel Comics' Black Widow, whose sions took her to the convention for Mother's Day.

Enright had wanted to see Jonathan Frakes, but she said he cancelled, so she didn't bother. She was happy to hang out and get an autographed Neal Adams lithograph of her favorite superhero, Thor.

There were quite a lot of other people willing to wait in very long lines to see the other "stars" at the Comiccon at the Ernst and Young Centre. James Marsters, Julie Newmar and Burt Ward drew long lineups.

Meanwhile, a gaping emptiness sat in front of the kiosk for actor David Prowse, the man who brought Darth Vader to life on the screen. A few lines down Billy Dee Williams seemed to be doing a brisk business, although not nearly so busy as the clear winner of the popularity contest — Firefly and Castle star Nathan Fillion.

Signs at the ends of queues warned that photography was forbidden and in the eyes of queue-dwellers there seemed to be the same sort of desperation you find in airport security line-ups or at the malfunctioning ATM machine near the E&Y Centre's pay-parking terminal.

The real fun was being had among folks buying toys and comics and pretending to be their heroes.

"You feel like Tony Stark," said Montrealler Guillaume Savoie, decked out in Call of Duty garb. His friend Benoit Decarie, dressed in a perfect replica of Master Chief, confessed to signing autographs as the chief himself. It took him two years to build the fibreglass armour.

"You feel like a superstar," said Savoie.

Turkey says it won't be dragged into Syrian war

Twin car bombs.

Biggest incident of violence across border since start of crisis

Turkey's prime minister vowed Sunday his country won't be drawn into Syria's civil war, despite twin car bombings the government believes were carried out by a group of Turks with close ties to pro-government groups in Syria. The bombings left 46 people dead.

Syria has rejected allegations it was behind the attacks. But Turkish authorities said Sunday they had detained nine Turkish citizens with links to the Syrian intelligence agency in connection with the bombings in the border town of Reyhanli, a hub for Syrian refugees and rebels just across from Syria's Idlib province.

Harsh accusations have flown between Turkey and Syria, signalling a sharp escalation of already high tensions between the two former allies. But Prime Minister Recep Tayyip Erdogan suggested that Turkey would not be drawn militarily in retaliation.

Saturday's bombings 15 minutes apart damaged some 735 businesses and 120 apartments. It also wounded dozens of people, including 50 who remained hospitalized Sunday.

Former Marxist group

Authorities suspect the leader of a former Marxist group, Mirhac Ural, now believed to be based in Syria, may have revived his group and ordered the attack.

- The group, Acilciler, was one of many Marxist groups active in Turkey through the 1970s and 1980s, and was long-rumoured to have been formed by the Syrian intelligence agency. Many of its militants allegedly included ethnic Arab Turks belonging to a sect close to Syria's Alawites.

Sleepless in Israel. Critics restless over Netanyahu's $127K bed on 5-hour flight

Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu will seek alternate sleeping arrangements when travelling after receiving a sky-high bill for installing a customized bed on a recent flight to London.

Netanyahu found himself facing a public uproar on Sunday after reports over the weekend that he had spent $127,000 US in public funds on a special sleeping cabin for the five-hour flight to attend Margaret Thatcher's funeral.

Netanyahu's office initially defended the decision, saying the prime minister had a busy schedule ahead of the flight and needed to be fresh for important meetings in Britain. But following public criticism, officials close to Netanyahu said late Saturday that he had been unaware of the cost, and once informed, he ordered the bed be cancelled on all future flights.

Earlier this year, Netanyahu stopped buying ice cream from his favourite Jerusalem parlour after an Israeli newspaper discovered his office was spending $2,700 US a year for the frozen treat.

Gunfire turns parade into pandemonium

New Orleans shooting.

Cops say street violence, not terror, responsible for injuring at least 19

Can't run, can't hide

"We'll get them. We have good resources in this neighbourhood."

Police superintendent Ronal Serpas on the suspects in the shooting.

Gunmen opened fire on dozens of people marching in a neighbourhood Mother's Day parade in New Orleans on Sunday, wounding at least 19 people, police said.

The FBI said that the shooting appeared to be "street violence" and wasn't linked to terrorism.

Many of the victims were grazed and most of the wounds weren't life-threatening, according to a police news release. No deaths were reported by Sunday night.

The victims included 10 men, seven women, a boy and a girl.

The children, both 10 years old, were grazed and in good condition, but police said at least two people were in surgery Sunday night.

Mary Beth Romig, a spokeswoman for the FBI in New Orleans, said federal investigators have no indication that the shooting was an act of terrorism.

"It's strictly an act of street violence in New Orleans," she said.

Officers were interspersed with the marchers, which is routine for such events. As many as 400 people joined in the procession that stretched for about three blocks, though only half that many were in the immediate vicinity of the shooting, said Police Superintendent Ronal Serpas.

Police saw three suspects running from the scene in the city's 7th Ward neighbourhood. No arrests had been made as of Sunday night.

The neighbourhood where the shooting happened was a mix of low-income and middle-class row houses, some boarded up. As of last year, the neighbourhood's population was about 60 per cent of its pre-Hurricane Katrina level.

Police vowed to make swift arrests. Serpas said it wasn't clear if particular people in the second line were targeted, or if the shots were fired in a random fashion.

Cleveland. Ariel Castro's brothers say they didn't know of kidnappings

Two brothers of the Cleveland kidnapping suspect say they fear people still believe they had something to do with the three missing women found in his home.

Onil and Pedro Castro told CNN that they've been getting death threats even after police decided not to charge them.

Pedro Castro says he would have turned in his brother

Ariel if he had known he was involved in the women's disappearance.

Ariel Castro is suspected of holding the women captive in his home for a decade. Authorities say he kidnapped all three, raped them and fathered a child with one. The women were found May 6th. The brothers were initially taken into custody then released. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Illegal-downloading megasuits rear head north of the border

Anti-piracy battle.

Case involving Teksavvy, Voltage Pictures could pave way for U.S.-style actions on file-sharing Massive lawsuits targeting people who illegally download copyrighted content are common in the U.S., where people have been stuck with hefty fines and out-of-court settlements. Now there's an attempt to bring that to Canada.

At the centre of the effort is Canipre, the only anti-piracy enforcement firm that provides forensic services to copyright-holders in Canada.

The Montreal-based firm has been monitoring Canadian users' downloading of pirated content for several months. It has now gathered more than

U.S. precedent

- Such lawsuits have been common in the U.S. Between 200,000 and 250,000 people have been sued in the last two years, according to Internet civil-liberties group the Electronic Frontier Foundation.
- Canadian consumers don't risk such severe damages as in the U.S., because of a bill passed last year that modified the federal Copyright Act. Bill C-11 imposed a limit of $5,000 on damages awarded for non-commercial copyright infringement.

one million different evidence files, according to its managing director Barry Logan.

One of its clients is now before Federal Court in Toronto, requesting customer information for over 1,000 IP addresses — a user's unique Internet signature — collected by Canipre.

That client is the American studio Voltage Pictures, maker of hundreds of films, including the Academy Award-winning Hurt Locker. On the other side of the case is Teksavvy, an Ontario-based Internet provider. The IP addresses flagged by Canipre link back to its users.

The case is set to resume next month. If the court orders Teksavvy to hand over customer info, it could be the beginning of a new chapter in the anti-piracy battle in Canada.

"We have a long list of clients waiting to go to court," said Logan, who estimates that about 100 different companies are paying close attention to the case. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Business to have bigger role in Arctic debates: Minister

Creating a bigger presence for industry at the world's premiere international forum on northern issues won't distract from its work on environmental problems, says the Conservative cabinet minister about to lead the group.

"Absolutely not," said Leona Aglukkaq, who will assume the chairmanship of the group of the eight nations that ring the North Pole starting on Wednesday.

"That research — the work of interest to all the Arctic regions — that will continue during our chairmanship."

Central to Aglukkaq's plans for her two-year term heading the Arctic Council is the creation of an Arctic business forum, which she described as a way for northerners and northern business to share ideas and solutions.

Factory collapse. Bangladesh to raise garment workers' pay

Bangladesh's government plans to raise the minimum wage for garment workers, a cabinet minister said Sunday, after the deaths of more than 1,100 people in the collapse of a factory building focused international attention on the textile industry's dismal pay and hazardous working conditions.

A new minimum-wage board will issue recommendations for pay raises within three months, Textiles Minister Abdul Latif Siddiky said. The cabinet will then decide whether to accept those proposals.

The wage board will include representatives of factory owners, workers and the government, he said.

The April 24 building collapse, the world's worst garment industry disaster, has raised alarm about conditions in Bangladesh's powerful textile industry, which makes clothing for major retailers around the world.

Working conditions in the $20-billion US industry are grim, a result of government corruption, desperation for jobs and industry indifference.

Minimum wages for garment workers were last raised by 80 per cent to about $38 a month in 2010 following protests by workers.

Greenhouse gases. Project aims to track megacities' emissions

Every time Los Angeles exhales, odd-looking gadgets anchored in the mountains above the city trace the invisible puffs of carbon dioxide, methane and other greenhouse gases that waft skyward.

Halfway around the globe, similar contraptions atop the Eiffel Tower and elsewhere around Paris keep a pulse on emissions from smokestacks and automobile tailpipes. And there is talk of outfitting Sao Paulo, Brazil, with sensors that sniff the byproducts of burning fossil fuels.

It's part of a budding effort to track the carbon footprints of megacities, urban hubs with over 10 million people that are increasingly responsible for human-caused global warming.

For years, greenhouse pollutants have been closely monitored around the planet by stations on the ground and in space. Now, scientists are observing large cities' emissions to help independently verify whether local climate goals are being met.

THE 2% SOLUTION AND OTHER MAGIC NUMBERS

It's not "zero means zero," the doomed bumper sticker of a tax freeze his predecessor Larry O'Brien rode into office, but Mayor Jim Watson's signature cap on property-tax increases, now reduced to two per cent for 2014, gets pretty close.

The dials got tweaked with little controversy at council last week, and if you don't recall an outcry from taxpayers eager to cough up more, how big of a surprise is that?

Members of the public may or may not have had anything to say on the matter, but they never got the chance. Watson's quickie introduction of the motion at committee escaped any opportunity for public comment before proceeding directly to the council vote.

The question was left to city councillors who face re-election in 2014, a circumstance under which voting against lower taxes probably doesn't seem prudent.

Capital Councillor David Chernushenko was the only dissenter, pointing out neglected sidewalks and roads as evidence that the city's succession of frugal budgets may have us skimp-

URBAN COMPASS

Steve Collins

ottawa@metronews.ca

ing on needed upkeep.

The two-per-cent solution is great advertising for Watson and council: The successful 2.5 per cent formula becomes an even lower-fat 2.0 in time for 2014.

It's a nice, even number, and it might even be the right one. It's certainly not far off this year's 2.09 per cent increase.

There's fine print, of course. Sewer and water rates will ramp up another seven per cent, and unplanned eventualities can always mess with those tidy budget numbers.

An arbitrator showed little concern for the city's budget cap this year, for example, when he awarded city police retroactive three per cent raises for 2011 and 2012. Further squeezing that cap in 2014 leaves even less room for the unexpected.

Watson waited until the Ontario government had tabled its budget, which contained welcome breathing room in the form of an ongoing gas tax injection for municipalities. But that budget has not yet been passed. For some cities, a minority government at Queen's Park might inspire more caution and flexibility, not less.

In another numerical tweak, the city adopted a new ethics package, another Watson campaign promise, with a requirement for councillors to disclose gifts they receive exceeding $30 in value, revised from the original proposed limit of $200.

Here's another number that may or may not be important. Nobody, I hope, would vote for anyone they honestly thought could be bought for $200, let alone any councillor whose price is a mere 30 bones.

But researchers studying the effect of trinkets handed out to physicians by pharma companies found that small gifts can be surprisingly influential, perhaps because they're considered innocuous. It's not the value of the present so much as the feeling of reciprocity that can make the recipient unconsciously more receptive to the subsequent sales pitch.

So, maybe the magic number is $30, or maybe every T-shirt, commemorative pen and lunch should be transparently logged.

And maybe holding the line on taxes at two per cent is exactly the right fiscal formula, not just a neat round number for 2014's campaign buttons. In any event, it seems likely to function as both.

It's the journey, not the destination

Buddhists carry lanterns in a parade during the Lotus Lantern Festival to celebrate the upcoming birthday of Buddha on a street in Seoul, South Korea, Sunday.

Legend has it that Buddha was born to a royal Hindu family in what is now Nepal, and on the night he was conceived, his mother, Queen

Maya, dreamed a white elephant with six white tusks walked around her three times, then hit her and disappeared into her right side. When she became pregnant, Queen Maya set off for her father's kingdom to give birth, as was the tradition.

But Buddha was born along the journey in a garden beneath a sal tree.

The light in the dark

Across Asia, Buddha's birthday is celebrated with colourful parades. The lighting of a lotus-shaped lantern in Buddhism traditionally symbolizes a display of religious devotion to performing good deeds and lighting up the dark parts of the world that are filled with agony.

Guide dogs and conservation. Charity event right as rain

News worth sharing

Media will always have to report on the tough stuff. But we know that Canada is full of compassionate people, inspiring projects and stories worth celebrating. Here's just one.

Pouring rain typically puts a damper on an outdoor event — but not for a recent fundraiser in Manotick.

In fact, a timely downpour seemed a fitting addition to the rain-barrel fundraising event co-hosted by Manotick's Canadian Guide Dogs for the Blind and the Rideau Valley Conservation Foundation.

The annual event was first held in 2011 when a summertime water ban was in effect across Ottawa, and rain barrels seemed a viable solution. Steven Doucette, a special events and guider co-ordinator, admits that guide dogs aren't usually associated with rain barrels, but he says the event "is really just trying to connect to the community."

Some people purchase rain barrels to specifically support Canadian Guide Dogs, but most simply need a barrel and are excited to support a local charity or organization. Plus, there is the added benefit of conserving water. CRAIG AND MARC KIELBURGER

RE: Hockey Alberta to Ban Body Checking at Pee wee Level, published May 8

As players for the Calgary Saints Division 2 Pee wee Hockey Team, we disagree with the ban on checking in the Pee wee and Bantam age groups.

We are both 12-year-olds. If the ban on checking goes ahead, when we get to the Bantam level where checking is allowed, we will be playing against players who will have three years of playing with checking, while we will only have one year of experience. We will have forgotten how to check safely, and will be injured much more easily. Also, if you ban checking at this level only in Alberta, when we go out of province to play, we won't know how to take a check safely.

Instead of taking away checking completely, we think there should be a zero-tolerance policy on head-hunting, which means deliberately hitting another player in the head.

Checking makes the game more exciting for both players and spectators. It is an important part of the game of hockey — please don't take it away!

To friend or not to friend Mom on Facebook?

Josh Knoller, a young professional in New York City, spent years refusing his mother's "friend request" on Facebook before, eventually, "caving in."

Today they have an agreement: she'll try not to make embarrassing comments, and he can delete them if she does.

One in three mothers are connected with their teens over Facebook, according to the social networking giant's review of how users self-identify.

With more than one billion Facebook users, that's a lot of mothers and kids keeping in touch through social media, says Fordham University communications professor Paul Levinson, author of New New Media. "Facebook has been a boon to family relationships," says Levinson.

Kelly McBride, an assistant professor of communications at LaSalle University in Philadelphia, says her students who "friend" their mothers keep their Facebook pages benign, using other social media like Instagram or Twitter for the racy stuff.

"They may be willing to 'friend' their mother, but when they do, they take down the drinking or partying or suggestive photographs," she says.

Meanwhile, parenting expert Susan Newman recommends that mothers wait until their children are independent adults before friending them.

Is three really more stressful?

New study. Weighing in on a report that claims three is the most stressful number of kids to have

IT'S ALL RELATIVE
Kathy Buckworth,
kathybuckworth.com

One of my favourite lines from The Simpsons is when Bart complains he is having the worst day of his life. "So far," responds his unsympathetic yet correctly predictive father Homer.

I liken that to a study by Today.com that suggests three is the most stressful number of children to have.

A mom of three explains that, versus two kids, the stress level increases when it comes to things like crossing the street. I would agree that getting three kids to do anything in tandem is harder than getting two kids to do it. But I have four kids, and to the best of my recollection, I don't recall sprouting an extra arm when that last child arrived.

Maybe for moms of three, three is the most stressful number of children for them to have ... so far.

The study indicates mothers of more than three kids, on average, described themselves as at a lower stress level than their triumvirate sisters.

It concludes that families with more than three children experience the Duggar Effect, referencing the TLC reality family with 19 children.

While I am 15 short of this number, I admit older kids can, on occasion, help younger kids. But does that really offset the stress of knowing you have more children to feed, clothe, potty train, change sheets for, teach how to drive, suffer through first dates with, explain birth control to and pay post-secondary education for? According to MoneySense.ca, the average cost of raising a child in Canada is almost $245,000. Adding this expense for each child doesn't raise your stress level? Really?

I'm not saying that three kids aren't stressful for a lot of people. It can be. Just like it is very stressful for some parents of one child, two, four, five, etc. I call it the Pitter Patter Principle. (The original Peter Principle I'm referencing states that people are promoted to a level of incompetency.)

One study claims that families with three kids have increased stress levels. iStock

Perhaps those who are lucky enough to actively choose the number of children they have sometimes also reach beyond the level of what they would see as acceptable stress. They are not incompetent in this way, of course; they just learn when to stop.

So what comes first? The proverbial chicken or the fertilized egg? The stress of having kids or the stress level of the parents prior to having them? Since we can't give back the number of children we had past the third one to do a truly fair comparison (I may have tried), I guess we'll never know. KATHY BUCKWORTH IS AN AWARD WINNING WRITER. VISIT KATHYBUCKWORTH.COM OR FOLLOW KATHY ON TWITTER @KATHYBUCKWORTH.

Instead of the typical white-flour pizza crust, try this linguine pasta crust, which has more fibre and nutrients, and goat cheese that goes so well with the seafood.

1. Preheat oven to 350 F. Cook pasta in boiling water according to package instructions or until firm to the bite. Drain and place in mixing bowl. Add egg, milk and Parmesan cheese. Mix well. Pour into pan and bake 20 minutes.

2. In non-stick skillet sprayed with vegetable spray, sauté seafood just until cooked, approximately 3 minutes. Drain and set aside.

3. In same skillet, heat oil; sauté garlic, peppers and onions for 4 minutes.

Pulled Chicken gets a Caesar salad touch

With temperatures getting warmer, we'd rather be soaking up the heat than cooking in it.

Although slow cookers are known for their ability to prepare hot comfort foods through the winter, savvy Canadian families are finding that slow-cooker meals in the spring offer them more time to enjoy the season instead of spending it inside worrying about dinner.

One of these great recipes is the Pulled Chicken Caesar Salad Sandwich.

1. Pour 1/2 of the barbecue sauce into the bottom of your slow cooker.

Ingredients

- 1 500 ml jar of your favourite barbecue sauce
- 4 boneless, skinless chicken breasts
- 1 ET TU Caesar Original Salad Kit
- 1 head of fresh romaine or 2 romaine hearts
- 6-8 kaiser rolls or hamburger buns

This recipe serves four. NEWS CANADA

2. Layer chicken pieces into bottom of slow cooker and pour remaining barbecue sauce over your chicken. Cook on low for 6 hours.

3. Once cooked, remove chicken from slow cooker, place on a cutting board and, using two forks, pull chicken into shreds.

4. Place chicken back in cooker, stirring until mixture is evenly coated. Cover and cook for approximately 30 minutes to absorb more liquid.

5. While chicken mixture is simmering, create your caesar salad using an ET TU Caesar Original Salad Kit. Prepare salad according to package directions.

6. Once ready, place chicken, topped with caesar salad mixture, on buns. NEWSCANADA.COM

OK, you're addicted to law shows on TV — and if nothing new is on, you won't mind watching the old Law & Order episodes you now know by heart.

Maybe you should consider a law career.

Sure, you could apply to law school, but there are other opportunities to work in the legal system that can be equally rewarding.

How about becoming a law clerk or paralegal?

A law clerk's job is mostly administrative, relieving lawyers of routine duties and helping them with more complex legal work when needed.

A paralegal has been educated to take on more legal responsibilities, but still under the guidance of a lawyer.

Their work touches every aspect of law, from land-use and expropriation, to criminal, tax, entertainment law and more.

A typical day might include drafting correspondence and legal documents, reviewing documents, researching, conducting client or third-party interviews and liaising with clients, courts and other counsel.

In Ontario, for example, paralegals can now be licensed and regulated like a lawyer (by the Law Society) and can practise law within a restricted scope, appearing before certain lower-level courts and administrative tribunals.

They have to pass a licensing exam.

Both the law clerk and unlicensed paralegal do not have to carry any liability insurance, while a licensed paralegal does.

There are college-level programs for both law clerk and paralegal.

Research reveals that students who take on jobs in high school more likely to succeed

Frown-worthy findings

So what's the bad news?

The Drexel University study also found that as the economy has suffered, jobs for teens have become more difficult to come by. In the Metro Philadelphia area, for example, the study revealed that in 2000, about 44 per cent of teens between the ages of 16 and 19 had jobs. Today, that number has fallen to 25 per cent, mostly due to the lack of employment opportunities, and also to the fact that older workers are holding onto jobs longer than they have in previous decades.

Paul Harrington, a Drexel University labour economist and lead author of the study, says that work experience in a formal job during high school (from ages 16 to 19) correspond to a 20 to 25 per cent increase in salary for teens almost a decade later. In this case, a "formal" job means a gig in food service or retail for a larger company, as opposed to work like babysitting or cutting the neighbor's grass. High school students who work, he says, are also more likely to have a job a decade after high school than their peers. The numbers are even stronger for teen boys, Harrington says.

people to understand how they contribute to making an organization function. The way you understand how that works is by doing it."

The other piece of data that the study revealed is that attendance in high school is a very strong indicator of good things to come. Harrington says that having high daily attendance in school means that students have a much higher chance of graduating from college. "Woody Allen said 90 per cent of life is showing up," Harrington says. "Turns out he was right."

Jeff Skinner wasn't on the ice much, but made a huge impact in Canada's 2-1 win over the Czech Republic at the IIHF World Championship on Sunday.

The Carolina Hurricanes forward scored on an end-to-end rush after weaving through the Czech defence and burying a wraparound behind goalie Ondrej Pavelec at 6:55 of the third period. The goal stood up as the winner as Canada (5-0-1) secured a quarter-final berth in the tournament.

Wayne Simmonds scored his first of the tournament for Canada, while Petr Koukal replied for the Czechs (3-3-0), whose quarter-final prospects depend on beating Norway on Tuesday.

Chad Jenkins (1-0) got his second major league win and first since Oct. 2, allowing two runs and seven hits in five innings-plus. It was just the fourth big-league start for Jenkins, who missed most of spring training and the start of the season with shoulder inflammation.

Spezza steps back into Sens' picture

NHL playoffs. No. 1 centre practises with team for first time since operation on back; unclear if he will suit up for action vs. Pens

Quoted

"I always felt there was going to be a light at the end of the tunnel and when that is I don't know."

Jason Spezza, who underwent back surgery earlier this season, says he will only return to the Senators' lineup these playoffs when he feels he "can help the team."

for the first time since undergoing back surgery for a herniated disc on Feb. 1 and says it was nice to take another step in his recovery.

"It's been a long process and a long season for me," Spezza said. "It felt good to join the team again and get some reps in. It may not seem like it and I may not play this year, but for me it's a small victory."

Despite speculation that Spezza could be done for the season, the fact the 29-year-old took part in a full practice was encouraging.

Spezza, who had been skating on his own before joining the Ottawa's AHL call-ups for more training, says he had some "ups and downs" over the course of his recovery but made improvements over the last few weeks that allowed him to take part in a regular practice.

Whether or not he plays depends on how his body reacts. The Senators will take on the No. 1 seed Pittsburgh Penguins in the second round of the Eastern Conference playoffs after Ottawa disposed of second-ranked Montreal in five games. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Round 2. Alfie & co. up to challenge Pittsburgh poses

The Penguins celebrate their series-clinching goal Saturday. PAUL BERESWILL/GETTY IMAGES

The Pittsburgh Penguins offer Ottawa a different challenge than the Montreal Canadiens, but the Senators feel confident they match up well.

"We know we're in tough against a very good team," captain Daniel Alfredsson said. "But we definitely don't think it's a task that's impossible."

The series has added intrigue, considering it was the skate of Pittsburgh's Matt Cooke that led to Erik Karlsson missing most of the regular season with a partially severed Achilles tendon.

"Whatever happened happened, and I'm back playing and I'm happy," Karlsson said. "It's not something I'm thinking about and I'm sure he's not thinking about it either."

Both Karlsson and MacLean say the incident won't be a distraction for the teams other than creating discussion for the next few days.

"We have to go out and play our best game if we want to beat Pittsburgh," Karlsson said.

"If we can find some consistency for 60 minutes in all the games we play, I think we'll have a good chance."

The Senators watched with interest as the New York Islanders won two games against the Penguins and came close to forcing a Game 7. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Curry overcomes ankle worry to lead Warriors' OT flurry

NBA playoffs. Golden State and San Antonio head into Game 5 tied two games apiece

His spirits down, his left ankle limp and his team's season hanging in the balance, Stephen Curry wondered whether he could recover for the biggest game of his career until a text message popped up on his phone around 2 a.m. Saturday.

Curry called back his mother, Sonya, and vented his frustrations about his latest — and most inopportune — injury setback. Finally, she spoke up to calm his concerns.

"She just reminded me ... to rely on my teammates and support," Curry said.

What followed was a Mother's Day masterpiece.

Stephen Curry and the Warriors beat the Spurs 97-87 in overtime Sunday.
JED JACOBSON/GETTY IMAGES

Curry scored 22 points to go with six rebounds and four assists on a bum ankle, rallying the Golden State Warriors past the San Antonio Spurs 97-87 in overtime Sunday to even the Western Conference semifinal at two games apiece.

"It seems like every time you get on a roll and feel somewhat healthy there's a setback," said Curry, who shot 7-for-15 from the floor, including 5-for-10 from 3-point range. "And it just tests you. It changes your routine. It changes your outlook on the game, your preparation. You've got to deal with the injury and the adjustments your making as a team."

Game 5 is Tuesday in San Antonio.

Harrison Barnes had 26 points and 10 rebounds, Jarrett Jack added 24 points in reserve and Andrew Bogut grabbed 18 rebounds to help Golden State erase an eight-point deficit in the final five minutes of regulation. The Warriors followed that up by scoring the first nine points of overtime.

Woods talks with clubs for TPC title

Tiger Woods had the last word against Sergio Garcia by winning The Players Championship on Sunday.

Woods ended a week-end of verbal sparring with Garcia by doing what he does best — closing out tournaments, even if he let this one turn into a tense duel over the final hour at the TPC Sawgrass. Tied with Garcia with two holes to play, Woods won by finding land on the last two holes for par to close with a 2-under 70.

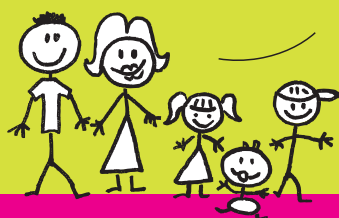

Garcia was standing on the 17th tee shot, staring across the water to an island as Woods made his par. He took aim at the flag with his wedge and hung his head when he saw the ball splash down short of the green. Then, Garcia hit another one in the water on his way to a quadruple-bogey 7. He completed his stunning collapse by hitting his tee shot into the water on the 18th and making double bogey.

Horoscopes

Aries

March 21 - April 20

Make an effort to see yourself the way others see you today. It's great that you have such a strong self-image but sometimes it makes it hard to understand why not everyone looks at life the same way.

Taurus

April 21 - May 21

The methods you have been using may be effective for you but that does not mean they are right for everyone. You will find yourself at odds with someone you work with today.

Gemini

May 22 - June 21

Your heart and your head are pulling you in opposite directions and it won't be until later in the week that you choose one approach over the other.

Cancer

June 22 - July 23

Keep your wits about you as the new week begins and try to maintain a light-hearted attitude to everything that happens. Some people may be feeling a bit down but that does not mean you have to get down there with them.

Leo

July 24 - Aug. 23

The best way to deal with people who annoy you is to ignore them. There is something imperious in the Leo nature and if you make out that someone does not exist no one else will believe they exist either.

Virgo

Aug. 24 - Sept. 23

It may be tempting to sell off a treasured possession so you can pay an outstanding debt but that's not a good idea.

Libra

Sept. 24 - Oct. 23

The cosmic pattern is slowly but surely shifting in your favor and by the end of the week the dark days will be behind you. Today you will have to deal with an emotional issue of some kind.

Scorpio

Oct. 24 - Nov. 22

You will have to make a difficult decision either today or tomorrow and some people are sure to be disappointed. That's not your concern. The only thing that matters is you stay true to your principles.

Sagittarius

Nov. 23 - Dec. 21

You may be easygoing by nature but when aroused you make a tenacious opponent. Today's events will encourage you to stand up for those who cannot stand up for themselves. With you on their side they might just win.

Capricorn

Dec. 22 - Jan. 20

You may worry that if you don't act quickly you will miss out on an opportunity of some kind but it isn't true. In fact the planets indicate most strongly that you should bide your time.

Aquarius

Jan. 21 - Feb. 19

If you have to be critical of someone today, either at home or at work, make sure you wrap up what you say in some kind of sugar coating. Not everyone has such a robust ego as you.

Pisces

Feb. 20 - March 20

Throwing money at a problem won't get you anywhere. If you stand back from your current situation a bit you will see it's not nearly as bad as you fear. It never is. SALLY BROMPTON
